DORMANT

BACKGROUND

Recruited out of Army special operations in the late 1990s; transferred to deniable R&AW tasking. Reputation across two decades as the service's first-choice penetration officer for hard networks. Withdrew from active duty after his last long-cover assignment and relocated to a Himalayan monastic community. Maintains no fixed contact protocol; located only by physical approach.

PSYCHOLOGICAL PROFILE

Stable, low affect, no observable guilt response to past actions. Subject regards the most extreme operational demands as ordinary cost of the work and states he has made peace with them. Not remorseful, not boastful. Assessors rate him as fully integrated rather than suppressed: he carries the decisions without distortion. Will not be flattered, coerced, or rushed. Offers counsel rather than absolution.

THE LUTHRA MATTER

Subject eliminated his own handler and mentor, identified in file as LUTHRA, as the price of access to a target group. Action assessed at the time as operationally justified and intelligence-positive. Subject does not contest the record and does not seek to revise it. The episode is the basis of his standing within the service and of the caution attached to him.

CURRENT DISPOSITION

Approachable but not recallable by order. In recent activity provided guidance and material assistance to two field officers (see ASSOCIATES) pursuing a present-day reckoning tied to a 2008 penetration of a foreign narcotics network. Subject's role was advisory and enabling; he did not deploy.

TRAINING

Army special operations selection and beyond: long-range infiltration, close-quarter killing, demolitions, evasion at altitude. R&AW tradecraft layered on top: deep legend construction, multi-year cover maintenance, agent handling, counter-surveillance. Fluent across northern subcontinental languages and the operational tongues of the Northeast and Golden Triangle corridors.

CAPABILITIES

Best-rated penetration operative on the books. Can build and hold a cover for years, win the trust of a hostile network, and act decisively against persons close to him when the mission requires it. Lethal in close work despite age; conditioned by mountain living. Greatest asset is judgement and instruction: he can teach an officer how to survive the unforgivable choice, which makes him valuable even when he does not move.

OPERATIONAL RECORD – SELECTED

1990s – Inducted; Army SF to deniable tasking.
2000s – Series of long-cover penetrations; LUTHRA matter closed operationally positive.
Post-assignment – Voluntary withdrawal to Himalayan monastery; ceased active deployment.
2026 – Located on site; provided guidance and materiel to officers SITA and MIRA re: reopened 2008
EXACT MONASTERY NODE AND APPROACH [REDACTED] [SEALED]

THREAT LEVEL - AMBER (friendly, conditional)

Aligned to service interest but not controllable; has killed an intimate for the mission and would again.

STANDING ORDERS

Do not task by signal or order; subject answers only to physical approach and only on his own terms. Approach unarmed and singly. Do not attempt coercion, leverage, or surveillance of the monastic community. Treat any assistance he renders as advisory and voluntary. Report contact upward within 24 hours. Do not attempt forced recall under any circumstance.
